

articles of exceptional interest, which will appear throughout the Magazine Numbers of The Outlook for 1898. The title of this series will be "James Russell Lowell and His Friends." Dr. Hale knew Lowell from boyhood up. In these twelve articles he will talk freely and with an abundance of anecdotes about Lowell, his friends and his times. Dr. Hale's originality and humor, as well as the exceptional interest of his subject, will make this series one of very wide interest and popularity. [$3 a year. The Outlook Company, 13 Astor Place, New York.]

The Preacher's Magazine for September is at hand, with a full and charming table of contents. "God's Yet," is a sermon of great worth by Joseph Parker, D. D. Also, "The Burden, and Heat of the Day," a message for the middle-aged, by W. Boyd Carpenter, D. D. "Christ Sanctifying Himself," by the Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, is a sermon of rich and helpful thought. Appropriate to Labor Day is a very readable discourse by Augustus Legge, D. D., entitled "The Cry of the Unemployed." The pages of Homiletics contain varied and valuable sketches and outlines. "The Power of Gentleness," by Theodore F. White, D. D.; "The Death-bed of Elisha," a Bible study by Rev. W. B. Russell-Cally; "Trust," by Edward Thompson, D. D.; "The Bow in the Cloud," by the Rev. W. H. Jones; and many other sketches of great suggestiveness. "What the Village Church Said," by Rev. T. G. Montague Powell, is continued. Notes on the International S. S. Lessons, and Outline Addresses on Golden Texts, by William E. Ketcham, D. D., maintain their usual charm. Various articles, such as "How I Get my Sermons," by Rev. Joshua Huigh; "The Weakness of the Modern Pulpit," by Rev. Jesse S. Gilbert, A. M., are attractive and beneficial. The article by Rev. John J. Pool, on "Homely Illustrations," which has attracted so much attention and favorable comment, is concluded in this issue. No choicer number of this steadily improving magazine has been issued. Single copy, 15 cts., or a year's subscription, 12 numbers, $1.50. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.
